INTRODUCTION

WELCOME TO YOUR REINCARNATION REPORT

Welcome Tarot.com's Reincarnation Report -- your doorway to the past. This report is designed to be helpful for those of any spirituality or belief system, regardless of what they believe about reincarnation.

Based on A.T. Mann's Reincarnation Time Scale theory, this report assigns a specific historical period to each sign of the zodiac in your birth chart. For instance, if you have a planet in your chart in Libra (400 to 1100 AD), then you resonate with -- or had a past life in -- that time period. By investigating the astrological significance of the planet in question, this report makes an educated guess about what you were like and what you accomplished in that past life. And finally, by measuring the planet's placement down to the degree, we can determine that incarnation's key date down to the decade, year or even month.

Understanding Your Reincarnation Report

Along with the astrological interpretation of each of your planets within a given time period, you will also receive personalized Reincarnation Summary Tables for each time period. These tables reveal significant things that influence or reflect that period, ranging from mythical figures to scientific inventions, from entire cultures to single individuals. These lists are meant to stimulate thinking about what your past lives may have looked like and to provide jumping-off points for you to further delve into the wonders of history ... wonders that may feel strangely familiar to you. The deities and historical individual presented in each table are personalized for you based on the planets that appear in that sign (and whose incarnations therefore manifested during that particular time period).

The table also includes a key date. Key dates are not necessarily when an incarnation was born. Rather, it is the moment that the incarnation experienced its most significant life event. That could be the day of the past life's birth ... or it could be a coming-of-age-ceremony, a marriage, a great accomplishment or quest or discovery, or perhaps a moment of extreme danger. The key date could even be when a past life died. There is no way to know for sure.

So Let's Get Started!

We will start with your Reincarnation Chart to get a visual of how the planets in YOUR chart map out through history.

THE THREE OCTAVES

The Reincarnation Report groups the signs of the zodiac, and therefore the historical periods, into three longer eras called Octaves. Like the musical intervals they are named for, these eras increase in "frequency" (the amount of energy of human endeavor on the planet) as they climb "higher" (as they progress into the future). Think of them as stepping stones in humanity's development from a simple, childlike state to a time of complete maturity and self-awareness that we may hopefully someday achieve.

The first four signs, Aries, Taurus, Gemini and Cancer, compose the Octave of Mythology, when our first sense of self-awareness began to emerge. From 50,000 years ago until 5000 years ago, in 3000 BC, we struggled to survive but were also very in touch with our natural surroundings. The next four signs, Leo, Virgo, Libra and Scorpio, compose the Octave of Civilization, from 3000 BC until 1500 AD, when the first major civilizations grew from their near-mythic founders, the major world religions came into being and the Classical Era developed. The last four signs, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius and Pisces, are the Octave of Individuality, starting at the Renaissance in 1500 AD and continuing until 1950 AD.

TRAVELING THROUGH HISTORY

Just as your birth chart is unique, so are your incarnations according to the Reincarnation Time Scale. Your planets will be scattered throughout the zodiac signs and therefore throughout the tapestry of history. Some time periods will have no planets in them at all; it may be that your soul did not manifest on earth in those times, or it may simply mean that you have nothing to learn from those incarnations or that you have little connection to them. Other time periods will seem laden with incarnations, sometimes even overlapping! This is not only possible, it is common. Our souls and imaginations are often drawn to the possibility and energy of specific historical periods; you might even think of yourself as having been alive as several different people simultaneously, which is one understanding of the idea of soulmates.

How the Octaves Affect You

Octave of Mythology: If you have a majority of your planets in Aries, Taurus, Gemini or Cancer, you have powerful and essential mythic identifications deeply embedded within you. You are probably more affected than most people by myths, pre-histories, fairy tales, religious beliefs, deities and legends. You will want to explore strange lands, go to primitive places, live close to or embedded in nature and will profoundly value the natural world.

Octave of Civilization: If you have a majority of your planets in Leo, Virgo, Libra or Scorpio you have strong associations with society, law, politics or religion. You tend to identify with community leaders, company founders and the like. You may have an inclination toward Classical life in your personal values or your artistic aesthetics.

Octave of Individuality: If you have a majority of your planets in Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius or Pisces, your soul revels in the energy and possibility of the modern humanistic world. You are likely to see our current way of life as being at the apex of the grand flow of civilization, that science, rationalism and industrialization are the natural end result of history. Recent history may influence what books you read, what places you prefer to visit and so on.

A Note About Conjunctions!

If your Reincarnation Chart has planets in conjunction (within a few degrees of one another), it may show that you had multiple incarnations that happened simultaneously, their lives overlapping in history. In such a case, you probably carry mixed identifications with that historical period, with different feelings arising from each incarnation, some good and some bad. In some rare cases this may have resulted in the meeting of what some refer to as soul mates: incarnations of the same spirit in two separate bodies, friends or lovers who forged incredibly close bonds.

CHAPTER 1:

OCTAVE OF MYTHOLOGY

After the appearance of modern humans about 50,000 years ago, early humanity became self-aware and explored that new consciousness during a mythological stage. It is mythic because early humans were nomadic with little common language, and information was transmitted over hundreds of generations before any known chronology existed. In that sense it was like a long dream that possibly is the origin of our dream lives today. Myths are stories passed verbally through thousands of years, modified and distorted by location, culture, invasions and wars, deeds of heroes and respect for ancestors -- all qualities that resonate with us in the modern age. Myths and legends carry the collective histories of us all before individuality, and indeed, before civilization itself, came into being. These past lives can describe our deepest truths, if we can only learn identify with them.

Aries marks the beginning of the Octave of Mythology, a period when we gratefully receive the blessed sun and rain of the sky gods, yet must helplessly suffer their tempestuous wrath.

THE ARIES PERIOD

48,000 – 26,000 BC

The Aries period (from 48,000 to 26,000 BC) was the birth of consciousness, when modern humanity emerged and began to harness language. These early humans banded together to hunt and gather from a landscape dominated by the last Neanderthals and superior beasts, and conditioned by the end stages of the great Ice Ages. They were nomadic, wandering the face of the earth and living in caves when they needed shelter. This primitive time saw humankind's development of primitive stone and flint tools, used not only to kill animals for food and forage for plants, but also to create clothing, shelter and other necessities.

This period was overseen by celestial deities, gods and goddesses who played the first role of creators. They determined your incarnations' welfare from the sky above with their control over the natural elements of wind, rain, water, ocean and sky. You also looked to the sun and moon, as well as the powerful cave animals that you hunted or feared, as gods. After all, it was natural forces like weather, animal movements and astronomical events that determined your group's migration patterns and upon which you depended for life. They were at the same time your guides and your gods.

The Aries period was a stage of your development when you simply went forward, pushed onward to the next battle or test of survival as the Ice Ages came and went over thousands of years. Initially, you were totally integrated with the forces of nature that you worshipped -- they were a part of you, and vice versa, and this deep connection with your core creative energy and self-assertion was the primary force in your known universe. All contacts, either with animals or other humans, were part of a fight for survival. Your living standards were based on the health of your tribal band. You had little sense of the passage of time, as the years were cyclical and you did not differentiate yourself from nature or from your tribe.

In this period, your role was clear (if a little limited) and heavily determined by gender. As a man, you would've taken a proactive role in hunting what there was to hunt, gathering what there was to gather and fending off predators. As a woman, you were called up to be not only a mother for the better part of your life, but also to be among the most resourceful laborers in human history. In this age of limited technology, your life would have been short, tough and intense. On the flip side, although a social pecking-order was in place, there was also the sense that everyone suffered the same burdens and benefitted equally from victories.

Your Past Lives in the Aries Period

You have no planetary placements in the Aries period

This time period has no planets in it. This may mean that your soul did not manifest on Earth in this period. Alternatively, it may simply mean that you have nothing to learn from the incarnations that lived during this time, or that your current incarnation has little spiritual connection to them.

CHAPTER 2:

OCTAVE OF MYTHOLOGY

In the Taurus period, our myths begin to transition from the sky above, bringer of rain and lightning, to the earth below, giver of food and shelter. This period is best represented by maternal fertility goddesses and earth mother cults.

The Taurus period (26,000 to 14,000 BC) saw humanity recovering from the Ice Ages and transitioning to a more stable lifestyle, creating complex hearths and storage areas to process and protect what was hunted and gathered. The world's earliest cave paintings were made, and evidence has been found of the use of music and dance in religious rituals. Humanity began carving statues of the fertile mother and the masculine bison (or bull). Their beliefs tended toward the feminine and included worship of the earth mother, the moon and fertility goddesses, all cults that bound people to nature.

Taurus represents physical sensation, sensing and working with the earth, relating to animals and plants, expressing oneself with art and sculpture, and the construction of one's physical reality and attachment. It promotes a love of the physical world and all of its complexities, including working with the land or gardening, owning property, having pets or animals, and navigating our territorial attitudes.

Your incarnations in this period would have lived hard lives requiring extreme resourcefulness. You enjoyed more developed technology and therefore spirituality, as better shelter and sustenance meant more time to consider the greater questions. You would most likely have lived as a fairly stationary hunter-gatherer, finding time to honor higher powers with respect and awe. Whether you were a mother or a hunter, you would have found opportunity to express your gratitude to the heavens through a burgeoning arts culture -- one whose evidence can still be seen to this day.

CHAPTER 3:

OCTAVE OF MYTHOLOGY

The Gemini period of myth is one of duality. Heaven and earth, male and female ideals, gods and titans, all have equal power and equal importance for a time.

During the Gemini period (14,000 to 7000 BC)

language continued to evolve, including the transition from notching to clay tokens as a form of record-keeping. Trade began to develop, animals like cats, dogs and chickens were domesticated, and the first pottery was made. Most importantly, though, modern agriculture was born during this period with the cultivation of primitive grains. Matriarchal cults went into decline and their masculine counterparts began to rise, symbolized by the Titans who ruled from heaven (Uranus) to earth (Gaia).

The Gemini time represents the instinctive mind, communication, adaptability and short journeys. The duality of Gemini leads to diverse identities, varied languages, multiplication of professions and family functions (which led to family names) and a great degree of diversity in the world. Reflecting the twin imagery of Gemini was the twin role of masculine and feminine in prominent religions of the time.

As a man, you would most likely have been a farmer, tilling the land you were suddenly able to mold to nourish you. Or else you would have been a warrior, enlisted to protect the land and family you were bound to. As a woman, life would have perhaps been less gratifying -- goddesses and fertility were not as respected as they were in the Taurus Period, and as a common person you would have been expected to spend much of your time indoors. Still, religious ritual was on the rise in many parts of the world as various cultures forged their own mythologies and belief systems, so revelry was not uncommon as the seasons changed, and these celebrations would have been enjoyed by those in all walks of life.

Your Past Lives in the Gemini Period

♃ II

Jupiter in Gemini

Your Jupiter is in Gemini, opposite its "home" sign of Sagittarius. You were a wise person, creating needed perspective and patience amidst a society of people who tended to act quickly and without deep thought. By contrast, you hesitated and provided a larger and deeper perspective to those who were unable to make such mental leaps. You also tended to your people's religious or spiritual direction.

♃ VI

Jupiter in the 6th House

Your Jupiter in the Sixth house gives you an ambition to expand, to learn and teach, to become personally involved in affecting the masses through teamwork, conscientious organization and the development of professional attitudes. An undercurrent of service to the larger whole characterizes this way of being, a motivation that comes to you from a previous incarnation sought to expand the horizons of knowledge.

Mercury harmonious with Jupiter: Your Mercury and Jupiter incarnations organized your many plans constructively, which created a context for success for your world view and wider interests. You learned a lot about yourself by looking more closely at your core beliefs. In this incarnation you will make a deeper commitment to your spiritual vision.

CHAPTER 4:

OCTAVE OF MYTHOLOGY

The myths of Cancer celebrate the thriving of humanity thanks to the new gift of agriculture, as represented by grain goddesses, and well-defended towns, as represented by local protector gods.

The Cancer period (7000 to 3000 BC) begins with the foundation of the first city Jericho, which signals the creation of market towns in fertile river valleys in Mesopotamia, Sumeria, India, Egypt and China. The nuclear family came into being as an emotional structure prominent in societies, as did hereditary wealth and property ... and to keep records of that property, written language. Metals, the wheel, ceramics and woven fabrics totally changed the human way of life. The urban centers were home to many gods of field, hearth and home, which would evolve into the Olympian pantheon. Despite its strong female figures, the Olympian gods were decidedly patriarchal, reflecting a trend toward the masculine that would continue throughout history.

Cancer qualities include the home, the family and its emotional bonds (especially the dominance of the mother), productivity of humankind or of nature, the inheritance of things from one's ancestors or the past, the expression of feelings, and an interest in domestic animals, arts and crafts.

In this period, you would have found yourself living less nomadically, but even more communally. You would have felt a part of an established society. You might have been a trader or a scribe -- a relatively new calling, as written language was just blossoming! Unfortunately, you would have been at the whim of a very stratified society, and would have been very aware of your place in civilization. Since your lifestyle would have been far more stationary, you would have prized personal possessions more. On the upside, you would have enjoyed more material comforts (and safety) than those who lived in previous periods.

Your Past Lives in the Cancer Period

Uranus in Cancer

Your Uranus in Cancer placement shows that your family situations in this period were highly erratic, as though there were primal changes in your living conditions throughout your life and that your very existence was often in doubt or threatened by world affairs. Your mother was a foreigner, and considered exotic or strange; her energies dominated you early on, and leading you to act rebelliously and impulsively as a way of attempting to gain freedom.

Uranus in the 7th House

Your Uranus in the Seventh House represents your past tendency to enter into eccentric partnerships that you could not escape, and which drew you into uncomfortable or even risky situations. You remain a rebel of a sorts, and feel most comfortable with people who similarly go against the grain. Your views on relationships are inconsistent and unusual, leaving others to look on in wonderment and a little envy.

Uranus inharmonious with Midheaven: Your Uranus and Midheaven incarnations resisted adapting to life changes, particularly at major junctions like coming of age, relocating to a new community, marrying and becoming a parent. You isolated yourself from others and your constantly changing life aims prevented you from accomplishing much. In your current incarnation if you learn self-discipline you will be refreshed and resolve outstanding crises.

Mars harmonious with Uranus: Your Mars and Uranus incarnations had strong desires for freedom, desires that endowed everything you did with an intense sense of hope. You remained undaunted in the face of any difficulty. In your current incarnation, you may find yourself receiving sudden insights from these past selves. Your frequent decision changes on the spur of the moment will surprise others, but don't be afraid to trust your instincts.

Uranus inharmonious with North Node: Your Uranus and North Node incarnations suddenly brought about unsettling and unexpected changes in partnerships and communal situations that generated a great feeling of unrest in your community. It was necessary for you to adjust your attitudes for survival's sake. In your current incarnation avoid being too restless and try to counteract your natural flighty temperament.

CHAPTER 5: OCTAVE OF CIVILIZATION

Around 3000 BC the founders of civilizations and the great world religions begin to appear in our records. More than mere mortals, these were said to be divine beings distilled into human form. This Octave paved the way and then brought into being the Classical era, and also saw its fall, descending into the Dark Ages. The Octave of Civilization is humanity's growing pains, where much was lost but also much was learned.

Appropriately for Leo, this Octave was ushered in by a period of great heroes and larger-than-life divine rulers like Achilles, Odysseus, Nefertiti, Gilgamesh and Solomon.

The Leo period (3000 to 800 BC) spans the time from the first mytho-historical individuals through the ages of the divine kings who founded the great early civilizations of Sumeria, Egypt, China and India. Before this time, there was only mythic history, and time was repetitive and cyclical; as this period matures, written history begins and gives birth to the major civilizing forces that still define our world to this day. Classical civilizations transformed the mythic influences of their early nomadic and tribal predecessors into profound and sophisticated cultures with fully developed art, architecture, language, symbolism and religion. This era was broadly shaped by individuals who proclaimed that they were gods in earthly form, like the Sun gods of ancient Egypt or Chaldea, the legendary emperors of China or the ordained prophets like Abraham and Moses.

Your Leo is creativity, consciousness of the self, selfish love, education, reliance on the self, sexuality and children, as well as formative energy, the wealth of ideas, domination, leadership, advancement through one's own activities and organization. It is also enthusiasm, plans and rulership.

In this era, you might have been a slave or a laborer, defying the mysteries of engineering and building great, lasting monuments. Or you might have been a legendary ruler, famed in Egypt or for ruling over a dynasty in China. In any case, you would have found yourself on the cusp of entirely new civilizations, and a new world whose beauty is still evident -- and keeping us guessing -- today.

Pluto in Leo

Your Pluto incarnation in the Leo period was associated with revolutionary changes in beliefs and religious ideas. You saw the reign of a divinely inspired king or pharaoh, whose self-expression was seen as an extension of that leader's divine rights. You aligned with the idea of art as an expansion of consciousness, and helped push for new creative endeavors and cultural advances that brought the idea of the individual into being.

♇ VIII

Pluto in the 8th House

Your Pluto in the Eighth House bequeaths a previous incarnation's religious fanaticism to this lifetime in the modern age. How you shape that zeal and toward what you apply it is up to you, but can be used to achieve great things. You may constantly search for meaning in life, a yearning that will eventually find you in a very public role in society, where your questing will resonate with many others.

Mars inharmonious with Pluto: Your Mars and Pluto incarnations were key players in dangerous political movements. You were aggressive, ruthless and would sacrifice anything -- perhaps even the lives of others -- to further your beliefs. In your current incarnation, be aware of your overly energetic tendencies and take evasive action before you do damage to yourself.

Neptune harmonious with Pluto: Your Neptune and Pluto incarnations were fated to be involved with larger public concerns. You learned to solve some of civilization's fundamental problems, at least on a smaller or personal scale. You had a spiritual perspective on life, and used that point of view well when instructing others in ways to deal with their problems. In your current incarnation, traveling will intensify your latent psychic activity.

Mercury inharmonious with Pluto: Your Mercury and Pluto incarnations didn't understand the public mind adequately, and this meant that you were unpersuasive and appeared to be uncertain about your true views. You tried to be forceful, but that was not a realistic way to bring your ideas forward. In this incarnation, try not to overestimate your abilities in certain areas of life.

CHAPTER 6:

OCTAVE OF CIVILIZATION

The Virgo period broadened this Octave's focus from the founders and heroes of each civilization or religion, to the importance of the civilization or religion itself.

The Virgo period (800 BC to 400 AD) is a time of Classical civilizations with the founding of Greece and Rome, the origin of major Eastern religions like as Buddhism, Hinduism, Taoism and Confucianism, and of course the founding of Christianity and the Gnostic pagan cults of the Middle East. The multitude of gods and goddesses are dissolved and abstracted into more abstracted symbols or ways of learning, praying and understanding the world. These transitions gave rise to the foundation of the sciences, as well as to the distillation and separation of fringe beliefs. Knowledge and understanding were key. The founders of the major religions were no longer gods on earth, as in the time period before, but rather were the mortal representatives or offspring of the heavenly deities.

Virgo is the ripe fruit of the vine and field, the discriminating mental function that strives for perfection and balance in its world through careful learning, analysis and the development of intellectual tools for comprehending the variety and complexity of the world. It carries an inherent naiveté that informs all efforts, as the field of knowledge narrows and diversifies into a focus on the details and the nature of learning techniques, rather than the big picture. The educational process is key to Virgo, and acts also as a metaphor for a renewed understanding of the physical body and foundation of health and well-being.

In this era, you might have found yourself acting as priest or priestess. You would have lived among impressive buildings and structures, enjoyed a more stationary way of life, and been part of a far more stratified society than in periods before. You could have been a slave, servant, scribe or scholar, and it would not have been unusual for you to have thrown yourself into the service of a specific religion.

CHAPTER 7:

OCTAVE OF CIVILIZATION

After the Octave of Civilization peaked, it then began its inevitable slide into conflict in the Libra period; though much was learned and created in this time, much was shattered and cast down.

The Libra period (400 to 1100 AD) marks the shift of the long arc of humanity from the group identity toward the individual identity. This saw a dramatic end to the classical civilizations of Greece and Rome in the west and China and India in the east, as both cultures fragmented and were broken apart by barbarian invaders. There was a split between east and west, as their roles in the world switched and they began to influence one another in profound ways. In the west it was a feudal time of Charlemagne, King Arthur and Merlin, while in the east Buddhism entered China and Islam was born. It was also a time of chivalry and romantic love.

Libra is balance and adjustment, denoted by the scales of liberty and law that are its symbol. During the Libra time, the idea of Roman law persisted in the west and Islam began to establish laws that governed all conduct in life. The institution of marriage was altered by the idea of romantic love, which took a central role in all personal and social affairs, even affecting the changes of civilizations. Libra idealizes relationships, trusts in institutions, and abides by the strictures of faith.

Depending on where you lived, you might have been an aggressive warrior in the service to a would-be worldconqueror. Or you might have been far more civilized, practicing courtly love as a knight in the service to a noble king. You may merely have watched love and war from afar while you eked out your day-to-day existence as a merchant, farmer, castellan or cook. You could have been a wandering troubador, a gatherer of firewood or herbs, an orchard grower or a midwife. While you were most likely of a caste that lived closely with and labored upon the land, individual specialties and talents would have defined you.

Your Past Lives in the Libra Period

Neptune in Libra

Your Neptune incarnation in the Libra period was a spiritual being, with religion being at the center of all the important decisions that you made in that life. At the time, it was difficult to know which spiritual guides to follow; you probably felt isolated and judged. The psychic or metaphysical repercussions of that focus echo in your life today, however. You are particularly sensitive to the sexual undercurrents in your platonic relationships and in your everyday interactions.

Neptune in the 10th House

Your Neptune in the Tenth House offers an unlimited number of high aspirations from a past life, but this life many not necessarily have the discipline and focus to bring them into being. Your tendency is to dream rather than to create material or tangible structures that will persist, so it is essential that you develop your sense of what is real and what is wish-fulfillment. Your family is mystified about who you are and what your relationship to them really means.

Midheaven in Libra

Your Midheaven incarnation in the Libra period always shared goals with a partner or friend; it was never merely about "you," but rather about "us." Aside from who to work with, though, you faced many difficult choices. You craved approval from the social order, for instance, but many of those old ways of life had begun to crumble, leaving you with few solid foundations to stand on. In this life, you may find an answer to that search for support by joining organizations with a feminine focus.

Neptune harmonious with Pluto: Your Neptune and Pluto incarnations were fated to be involved with larger public concerns. You learned to solve some of civilization's fundamental problems, at least on a smaller or personal scale. You had a spiritual perspective on life, and used that point of view well when instructing others in ways to deal with their problems. In your current incarnation, traveling will intensify your latent psychic activity.

Neptune harmonious with Ascendant: Your Neptune and Ascendant incarnations gifted one another with spiritual or psychic awareness. Such powers obviously shifted your image of the world, making you likely to seek out others who saw the world as "clearly" as you did. In this life, you would do well to remember that the blurrier something is, the closer to truth it is likely to be.

Neptune inharmonious with North Node: Your Neptune and North Node incarnations had lifelong tendencies to expect too much from relationships. Disappointment led you to become associated with a peculiar mystical or religious community, but the feeling of inclusiveness that this provided at first was, eventually, shown to be impermanent. In your current incarnation, you must be your own guide. Do not look to others for easy answers to your spiritual questions.

Mercury harmonious with Midheaven: Your Mercury and Midheaven incarnations were based totally on self-knowledge, and this created a unique and highly mental outlook on things. Your ambition took precedence over relationships. In this incarnation, meditate on your higher goals in a more open way; what role can your loved ones play in helping you bring your objectives to fruition?

Uranus inharmonious with Midheaven: Your Uranus and Midheaven incarnations resisted adapting to life changes, particularly at major junctions like coming of age, relocating to a new community, marrying and becoming a parent. You isolated yourself from others and your constantly changing life aims prevented you from accomplishing much. In your current incarnation if you learn self-discipline you will be refreshed and resolve outstanding crises.

CHAPTER 8:

OCTAVE OF CIVILIZATION

The Octave of Civilization ended in darkness, as is Scorpio's way, but not without hope. With pain comes transformation and healing.

The Scorpio period (1100 to 1500 AD) was a ruthless struggle for survival that intimately intertwined physicality, passion, sexuality, magic and mysticism in a powerful undercurrent. This was a time of major upheavals, of civilizing forces informed by religious fanaticism, such as the Crusades (in which Christianity and Islam fought for centuries) and the Inquisition (in which the last remaining Earth Mother cults were persecuted). This all occurred before a backdrop of plagues (like the Black Death) and hardship encompassed by the Dark Ages. All of the former classical territories broke down into city-states and monarchical kingdoms that were constantly at war with one another. Major religious orders reinforced their holdings by first creating monasteries, whether Christian in Europe or Buddhist throughout Asia, while the neo-Confucian dynasty in China dominated. As the caretakers of knowledge and often of power and wealth as well, the religions later sponsored the creation of dramatic structures in honor of their gods, such as the great European cathedrals and the mosques and temples of the east.

Scorpio is an awareness of the cycle of life and death and all of its implications, as it vacillates between chastity and wanton sexuality, between religious reserve and wild passion. This is the deepest and most hidden source of emotional power in the world, and its force is simultaneously grand and dark. Scorpio controls and directs your emotions, brings you into life and death situations, and revives your interest in the mysteries, in magic and in the extraordinary power of healing using the plant world.

The roles and professions of your incarnations in the Scorpio period were likely to be eclipsed by your experience of danger and fear. Perhaps you were in fear of imprisonment for religious ideals, or in fear of losing your life -- or a loved one's -- to a merciless disease. You might even have found yourself living in a quickly-shrinking civilization, watching your way of life perish. And whatever your walk of life -- commoner, merchant or nobleman -- you would have had to choose between difficult allegiances in the face of impending war.

Your Past Lives in the Scorpio Period

Mars in Scorpio

Mars rules the sign of Scorpio, so your Mars incarnation in the Scorpio period felt right at home in this time and place. You were a warrior, an explorer, an adventurer. You traveled to many foreign lands, and had to be continually on the move to stay one step ahead of your enemies. You were outrageous and daring in both battle and in love, where you let your passions take over in place of your usually cool and calculating side.

Mars in the 11th House

Your Mars in the Eleventh House tells a past life's tale of a deliberate fight for freedom and individual self-expression, possibly in artistic and creative ways. This life is all about continuing that fight, building edifices that symbolize independence from the norm and allow you to rise above suffocating restrictions. You easily align yourself with revolutionary or radical ideas and their associated groups, but are frustrated when progressive goals become diluted by popularity.

Saturn in Scorpio

Your Saturn incarnation in the Scorpio period was a scientist who participated in debates or studies that brought profound changes to the world. Being highly resourceful and adaptable allowed you to thrive in your intellectual activities despite the legal and moral restrictions of the time. You felt at ease and curious about the natural world, in which you found solace from the oppressive power structures of the day.

Saturn in the 10th House

Your Saturn in the Tenth House offers great patience from a past life, one that focused on planning and partnerships. Your current self has extravagant expectations which, because you infect others with them, are actually possible of being met. While initially you are quite cautious and conservative, you will learn to take risks. The penalty for such risks is less likely to affect you in your current lifetime than they are to have karmic consequences further down the line.

Mars inharmonious with Pluto: Your Mars and Pluto incarnations were key players in dangerous political movements. You were aggressive, ruthless and would sacrifice anything -- perhaps even the lives of others -- to further your beliefs. In your current incarnation, be aware of your overly energetic tendencies and take evasive action before you do damage to yourself.

Mars harmonious with North Node: Your Mars and North Node incarnations fostered good cooperation with others, particularly family and groups with similar interests. You used such relationships to help you express your creative side, which resulted in powerful unions. In your current incarnation you find group activities to be a successful arena for you.

Mars harmonious with Uranus: Your Mars and Uranus incarnations had strong desires for freedom, desires that endowed everything you did with an intense sense of hope. You remained undaunted in the face of any difficulty. In your current incarnation, you may find yourself receiving sudden insights from these past selves. Your frequent decision changes on the spur of the moment will surprise others, but don't be afraid to trust your instincts.

Mercury inharmonious with Mars: Your Mercury and Mars incarnations were often frustrated by others' criticism, yet you refused to your mind. Instead, you resorted to obstinate and cynical methods, not taking others' attitudes seriously. In this incarnation you should say what you really mean right now.

Venus inharmonious with Saturn: Your Venus and Saturn incarnations were lonely and dissatisfied throughout your lives. You blamed your isolation on the society you lived in, even though it was a problem of your own creation. Early separations from family were the cause of you emotional inhibitions, something you have a strong fear of in this incarnation, even if you haven't experienced such loss in your current lifetime.

Sun inharmonious with Saturn: Your Sun and Saturn incarnations felt isolated from everyone around them, even your closest friends and family. This was because you concentrated on your personal goals to the exclusion of any others.

CHAPTER 9:

OCTAVE OF INDIVIDUALITY

The Octave of Individuality begins with the voyages of discovery and the emergence of the age of Humanism that we call the Renaissance. Enquiring minds extended the bounds of the world to encompass the entire planet and beyond into the heavens, the world was mapped, and the sciences that define modernity came into being. Humanity reached its limits and some attempted to venture beyond them.

Few births are easy, though, and the Sagittarian beginning to this Octave was as tempestuous as it was exciting.

The Sagittarius period (1500 to 1720 AD) was the Renaissance, when the great voyages of exploration brought the world into perspective. The European discovery of trade routes to North America and the Far East linked the many diverse strands of classical civilization and expanded the horizons of humanity within as well as without. The Americas and India were colonized and explored, and the wealth of the Inca and other proud cultures was mercilessly plundered. The great forefathers of science like Galileo and Kepler coincided with the profound artistic traditions of Michaelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci and the literary profundity of Shakespeare and Milton.

Sagittarius is the advent of your inner life, meditation and expansion of your inner and outer horizons. It is the realization that the higher mind is critical, that philosophical and spiritual beliefs can lead to illumination and enlightenment. It is an introduction to the universal viewpoint, seeing the planet as one organism, and aspires to broaden your perspective and your search for inner understanding.

What a time to be alive! Your chances at long life would have increased as medical technology approached modernity. Aesthetically, you would have been witness to some of the most amazing art of all time. Your perspective of the world expanded, too, as tales of the new, far reaches of exploration reached your ears ... in fact, you might have been on one such world-expanding voyage! Or you might have been one of the unfortunate tribal members in these "new" lands, in which case your lot would have been to see your world turned upside down.

Your Past Lives in the Sagittarius Period

Moon in Sagittarius

Your Moon incarnation in the Sagittarius period was a woman with the broad-mindedness of Italian queens and the drive of the time's great artists. You believed in the value of great art and architecture, and in individual accomplishments being more important than outmoded moral judgments. If you were a leader, you were a benevolent one, profoundly loved by your people. Your lofty attitudes and liberal beliefs fit with your adventurous partners, and together you were able to bring about great changes and an enlightened attitude in general.

Moon in the 11th House

Your Moon in the Eleventh House carries emotions from a past life that were affected profoundly by highly abstract visions of society and of relationships that cannot possibly compare to the ideals you have in mind. You are at your best when you strive to reach these visions and ideals, but they make it hard for you to establish deep connections with others. Celebrate your individuality and uniqueness.

Ascendant in Sagittarius

Your Ascendant incarnation in the Sagittarius period loved living during the time of the Renaissance, as it fit perfectly with your past self's visions of the ideal world. You had a position of power, a member of an enlightened ruling class who was very responsive to the demands of everyday reality and yet was willing to participate in a worldwide experiment that brought a new perspective to humanity regarding our role in the universe.

Moon harmonious with Venus: Your Moon and Venus incarnations desired affection and love. You had excellent taste, something that is still true today, and were skilled in the social arena.

Sun harmonious with Moon: Your Sun and Moon incarnations both benefited from energetic, heartfelt romantic relationships. You learned to adapt to others' emotions, something that empowered your family and community and continues to give you skill at making the most of your interpersonal experiences.

Neptune harmonious with Ascendant: Your Neptune and Ascendant incarnations gifted one another with spiritual or psychic awareness. Such powers obviously shifted your image of the world, making you likely to seek out others who saw the world as "clearly" as you did. In this life, you would do well to remember that the blurrier something is, the closer to truth it is likely to be.

CHAPTER 10:

OCTAVE OF INDIVIDUALITY

As it became more and more clear that anything was possible in this Octave, the Capricorn period continued the momentum of change ... but at the cost of the destruction of both individual lives and natural environments.

The Capricorn period (1720 to 1840 AD) was the apex of the ego-consciousness of humanity in its physical and material manifestation. The outer world was conquered and the focus turned onto science and the industrial revolution as well as the struggle of nation-states to become autonomous, breaking away from their monarchical roots. The American and French revolutions shocked the world order amidst rich colonial empires. During this time great discoveries like hydrogen and the periodic table of the elements, electricity, coal and steam-driven machines, and railroads altered the focus of life and created a challenge to control the world with a materialistic attitude. The colonial invasions brought raw material just as the classical world view was eclipsed by rationalism, and the arts reached their peak with Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Balzac and Hugo.

Capricorn is your power of self-concentration, of the aims and aspirations of ego to conquer and control your world. It symbolizes success, ambition of perfected matter in the realm of the physical world and, by extension, government. Outer structures crystallize in Capricorn and the patriarchal principle is totally dominant; utility and finance are the greatest assets. Capricorn organizes and confines, creates limits and suppresses the personal in favor of the pragmatic.

Where to begin? You might have been a worker in the most horrific of factory conditions, or a respected military officer battling to keep social order. You may have been a gentleman of leisure, reading up on shocking political developments while taking in the euphoric sounds of great composers. You could've been laboring long and hard on the railroads, fighting on either side of the American Civil War or in a number of revolutions. In the Capricorn period, you would've been a part of a world moving into the great modern age!

Your Past Lives in the Capricorn Period

North Node in Capricorn

Your North Node incarnation in the Capricorn era had a tendency to exploit situations that only you saw available. Although you had great responsibilities to others, you were able to put aside these concerns and get on with matters in a pragmatic way. You were forced to grow up and initiate yourself into the mysteries of your world in order to fulfill your higher task; the changes that this caused in you were profound.

North Node in 1st House

Your North Node in the First House is the extroverted and active aspects of your nature that were necessary for survival, whatever your outer circumstances. You were the most ardent and enthusiastic member of your band when it came to confronting danger, for leading others into the fray. Protection ran in your blood and you received great respect and the complete support of the elders for your efforts.

Mars harmonious with North Node: Your Mars and North Node incarnations fostered good cooperation with others, particularly family and groups with similar interests. You used such relationships to help you express your creative side, which resulted in powerful unions. In your current incarnation you find group activities to be a successful arena for you.

Neptune inharmonious with North Node: Your Neptune and North Node incarnations had lifelong tendencies to expect too much from relationships. Disappointment led you to become associated with a peculiar mystical or religious community, but the feeling of inclusiveness that this provided at first was, eventually, shown to be impermanent. In your current incarnation, you must be your own guide. Do not look to others for easy answers to your spiritual questions.

Uranus inharmonious with North Node: Your Uranus and North Node incarnations suddenly brought about unsettling and unexpected changes in partnerships and communal situations that generated a great feeling of unrest in your community. It was necessary for you to adjust your attitudes for survival's sake. In your current incarnation avoid being too restless and try to counteract your natural flighty temperament.

CHAPTER 11:

OCTAVE OF INDIVIDUALITY

Freedom and invention became hallmarks of individual potential as the Octave progressed into the Aquarius period.

The Aquarius period (1840 to 1910 AD) saw idealist, utopian, socialist and humanitarian ideas morph into events like the communist manifesto of Marx and Engels, the American Civil War that brought about the end of American slavery, and Darwin's Origin of Species, which placed the current world at the apex of an evolutionary view of history. The science that is the foundation of the modern industrial world came into being with railroads, mines, and factories against the chaos of the gold rushes of the American Wild West. Symbolic technological visions of the world played against the Romantic artists and writers, and spirituality entered the dialogue through Schopenhauer, Nietzsche and Madame Blavatsky, and the symbolist and impressionist painters further detached vision from reality.

Aquarius is abstraction, the contrast between your real world structures and your idealistic fantasies about what might be, planning and aligning with the larger social consciousness, whether or not you agree with it. You are universal yet the profusion of groups with competing beliefs and doctrines leads to an eventual shattering of the accepted forms in inventive and original societies where individuality makes its mark through propaganda, networks and movements.

Your incarnations in this period may have been colonists, at the spearhead of their expanding culture. You might have been a member of the new skilled labor groups, or a business owner. You may have ridden on the railroads into the wild west, or been a small-town doctor reading about the frontier in pulp penny publications. You could have existed anywhere on the social strata -- from the lowest of the working class in the throes of the Industrial Revolution, to the wealthiest of the Gilded Age. One thing's for certain: you were living in some sort of frontier, whether it was the Wild West or new intellectual territory!

Your Past Lives in the Aquarius Period

Sun in Aquarius

Your Sun incarnation is in the Aquarius period watched as the age of royalty disappeared in a cloud of social individuality. You linked with others who shared your ideals of either the old ways or of freedom, and either fought along with them to achieve your goals or left the social order to create new generations who were insulated from the ideas of the masses. You internalized the idea of evolution, even if you had never heard of it, and thought of yourself as being at the peak of your personal evolution. You took over the main role, if only as a sheriff in a Western town desperately seeking order.

Sun in the 2nd House

Your past lives taught you to enjoy the beautiful and bounteous things in life, like your land, art and other expressions of the natural world and its bounty. Since so much of your energy is still applied to the physical world and your possessions, they become your signature: your projects occupy most of your time and energy. You are drawn to relationships that support these priorities and bring greater stability and security to your life.

Mercury in Aquarius

Your Mercury incarnation in the Aquarius period believed totally in revolutionary ideas, taking them into both your personal and collective spheres of your life. You tended to scatter your energies amidst all of the requirements of your expanding world. Your quick grasp of information allowed you to embrace technology and progressive education, so that you advanced beyond most others in your understanding of a vision of a brighter future.

Mercury in the 2nd House

Your Mercury in the Second House suggests that you tend to be extremely patient with those around you, probably because you were so close to the slow processes of the physical world and were bonded to the rhythms of life in deep profound ways. You may seem focused and one-sided to others, but your tendency to stay attuned to important issues brings a stable life, the acquisition of material things and a degree of security. You stick to formal patterns in life to avoid having to deal with unforeseen emergencies and unpredictable situations, and this might make you seem a bit ponderous, but the stability is worth it.

Venus in Aquarius

Your Venus incarnation in the Aquarius period had progressive feelings allied to individualistic rights and manifested as ideas that you lived: free love and universal brotherhood. You formed groups that propagated your ideas, joined with others way beyond your natural home, and associated yourself and your values with highly abstract visions of the future. Your ideas were so highly developed, however, that they led to detachment from basic human affections.

Venus in the 2nd House

Your Venus in the Second House means that your past incarnations were physically quite beautiful, verging on sublime. These selves had a limitless ability to love the world and the people in it, but also had an insatiable appetite for being loved. You still yearn for and require such devotion. Once you commit yourself to another who returns your affections, you remain extremely loyal and will do anything to satisfy or serve them. In a way, you serve love itself and the beauty that this engenders. Your feelings are very deep and profound, and you primarily express yourself through your artistic sense.

Sun harmonious with Venus: Your Sun and Venus incarnations both cultivated intimate associations with beautiful individuals or talented artists. Their sense of beauty and style still influence your life today, particularly when it comes to seeking romantic partners.

Sun inharmonious with Saturn: Your Sun and Saturn incarnations felt isolated from everyone around them, even your closest friends and family. This was because you concentrated on your personal goals to the exclusion of any others.

Sun harmonious with Moon: Your Sun and Moon incarnations both benefited from energetic, heartfelt romantic relationships. You learned to adapt to others' emotions, something that empowered your family and community and continues to give you skill at making the most of your interpersonal experiences.

Mercury harmonious with Midheaven: Your Mercury and Midheaven incarnations were based totally on self-knowledge, and this created a unique and highly mental outlook on things. Your ambition took precedence over relationships. In this incarnation, meditate on your higher goals in a more open way; what role can your loved ones play in helping you bring your objectives to fruition?

Mercury harmonious with Jupiter: Your Mercury and Jupiter incarnations organized your many plans constructively, which created a context for success for your world view and wider interests. You learned a lot about yourself by looking more closely at your core beliefs. In this incarnation you will make a deeper commitment to your spiritual vision.

Mercury inharmonious with Mars: Your Mercury and Mars incarnations were often frustrated by others' criticism, yet you refused to let it affect your mind. Instead, you resorted to obstinate and cynical methods, not taking others' attitudes seriously. In this incarnation you should say what you really mean right now.

Mercury inharmonious with Pluto: Your Mercury and Pluto incarnations didn't understand the public mind adequately, and this meant that you were unpersuasive and appeared to be uncertain about your true views. You tried to be forceful, but that was not a realistic way to bring your ideas forward. In this incarnation, try not to overestimate your abilities in certain areas of life.

Venus inharmonious with Saturn: Your Venus and Saturn incarnations were lonely and dissatisfied throughout your lives. You blamed your isolation on the society you lived in, even though it was a problem of your own creation. Early separations from family were the cause of your emotional inhibitions, something you have a strong fear of in this incarnation, even if you haven't experienced such loss in your current lifetime.

Moon harmonious with Venus: Your Moon and Venus incarnations desired affection and love. You had excellent taste, something that is still true today, and were skilled in the social arena.

CHAPTER 12:

OCTAVE OF INDIVIDUALITY

The Pisces period not only ends this Octave, it embodies it: dynamic growth, conflict and energy that is used both for good and for evil.

The Pisces period (1910 to 1950 AD) is a time of karmic returns, endings, isolation and illusions, and major dissolutions of classical values in the world. Pisces' contradictory emotional impulses manifest as major collisions in the World Wars at the beginning and end of this period, along with the Russian, Mexican and Chinese revolutions, all culminating in the formation of the United Nations. These times also show dramatic changes in collective perceptions beginning with Freud's formulation of psychoanalysis, Einstein's discovery of relativity and the breakdown of conventional forms in cubism in art, atonal and arrhythmic musical compositions, the writing of Joyce and the existentialists, and above all the creation of an illusory medium of the cinema. In this era, our gods and goddesses become those of the silver screen.

Pisces is purification through karmic retribution, a great sensitivity and receptivity to higher principles that dissolve boundaries and make cross connections yet remain dependent on deep emotional connections. It stresses compassion and passivity to the will of others, subservience to fate, and the creation of solutions to the threat of decay and chaos. Its tools are meditation, spirituality and the self-sacrifice of universal compassion.

It would be impossible to encapsulate the 20th century in a list of professions or nationalities. During the Pisces period, you could have been anyone, anywhere, from a welder working in the naval shipyards of San Francisco, to a peasant farmer in the remote highlands of China, to a top-tier star of the silver screen, to an all-American housewife. The possibilities are endless!
